Program description

This academic program, approved by Senate in 1968, consisted primarily of a mix of selected courses that had an international component from three major departments, Economics, History, and Political Science, but also included courses from other social sciences departments that also had an international component. The program was revised in 1999, introducing a more structured and interdisciplinary approach based on required courses defined and controlled by the International Studies Program. In 2006, the Senate of York University approved the transformation of the International Studies Program into a Department of International Studies (DIS). In September 2011, the Department reexamined its academic program and introduced the concept of three thematic pillars that touch on fundamental issues in international society, but also strengthen the program's interdisciplinary approach and identity.

Summary

The International Studies program, the annual student symposium, the student-run Glendon Journal of International Studies and internship and/or thesis option provide attractive opportunities to students. The program demonstrates its commitment to ongoing improvement. It has identified further enhancements that have been endorsed by the consultants and encouraged by the Principal. Among the plans already begun is a review of course offerings that may satisfy the “courses outside of the major” requirement. This has resulted in an increase of major courses available in French and in English. A tenure track appointment has been authorized. The program is also focused on student success in the areas of experiential education, student completion times and student success in entering graduate programs.
